I'm trying to get a page that's loads with a certain amount of content to load and scroll to the bottom on load. So far i'm at this point where it scrolls fine if i click a link or load it in a new tab but not on load. What am I doing wrong? I'm at a loss. Thanks!

What's New in the?

Passwords are the biggest secret in the world of computer systems, and with good reason. A virus can penetrate and wreak havoc on your personal files, when you least expect it. In order to prevent this from happening to you, you should create complex passwords with a variety of characters and numerals. If you are already using the simplest password, it is still advisable that you change it. Yes, it is possible that you might forget your password, but your system could be vulnerable to attack by somebody who finds it, and if you have a good password that is not too simple, it will be harder to crack. For these reasons, you should always change your password after a while, or when your computer will be stolen, so that it will be very difficult for someone to crack. You may have a few standard ones, but it is useful to have a number of the more complex and difficult ones as well. Tip: To help you remember your password, you can use a number of techniques to help you get the password correct. The first thing you should do is to write down the password on a piece of paper. The second thing you should do is to put a Post-It note on your monitor, and write the password on it. The third thing you can do is to save the passwords into a word processor file, and do the same thing. When you are finished, you need to run a program that is able to read those passwords from a file. Once you have finished saving all your passwords, you can add them to a password list on your computer. If you have a simple password, then you should make a password of the computer name, and use the same password. Then, add other passwords as the rest of the system. Tip: Never use a password that is too long, or has more than eight characters. Using more than eight characters will make it impossible to remember the password. If you use some type of secret-question authentication on your computer, you should know the answer to those questions. You should never use a password that is the same as your username. Your password should be a mix of a few of the above three methods. Then, when you need your password, you should answer the question, and enter your answer. If you have no idea what the question is, you may need to use a dictionary program to get a list of possible answers, and then select one from that list. You should make your password as complex as possible. One common, and very bad, password is a single digit number. A good password should include characters from each of the three methods listed above. Never use a common word as a password. It is much too easy for someone to guess. You may want to add a number of letters or numbers to it, as long as it is not a common word. When you
