It works in a pretty simple way - when you enable YouTube downloading it starts scanning the site and checks for the links to the videos you want to download. If you have a lot of clips, the app will ask you to set how many threads it can use. And that's it. It will then start downloading the contents of the URLs you've entered in a folder. This is a pretty old app and over the last couple of years it has gone through some changes. Version 5.6.4 now has a new dark theme, plus the old version is still available to those who aren't quite in the mood to install the new one. Added dark theme (5.6.3) On May 2, Easy youtube downloader released version 5.6.4 of the app, which brought a dark theme to the app. This should not be the last version since there's still a free version of the app available for download. The only downside is that you need to upgrade to the new version.
