KEYMACRO is a program that can identify characters, numbers, punctuation marks and other data from the keyboard. You can then insert them into files and databases, e.g. by entering them into your applications. KeyMacro supports regular expressions, including capture groups. This allows you to save found data as variables and call them later. You can also copy the keys typed and paste them into another application, which will allow you to insert them into a file or database. The program also supports macros for all major operating systems. KeyMacro can search for keystrokes on the computer, on the network, on removable devices, and on the clipboard. You can set the keys to be searched for on startup, which is very convenient. You can also disable a number of features, such as displaying the keystroke positions, windows appearing and closing during keystrokes and silent typing mode. KeyMacro can capture text from the system clipboard, from a specified application, from other applications or from a file. It can also process text files or line-by-line. KeyMacro is a very flexible utility. License: The trial version of the program is free. The full version is $9.95.

PuTTYTelnet is an enhanced Telnet client for Windows. It provides an easier to use interface, some features that Telnet clients lack, and more security. A very popular feature of PuTTYTelnet is that you can use it remotely without a Telnet client being installed on the target machine. PuTTYTelnet requires PuTTY (www.chiark.greenend.org.uk/~sgtatham/putty/download.html) or similar Telnet client.

PuTTYTelnet adds several buttons to PuTTY, and allows you to change the look of the program. You can also get a "rich" text mode, with different fonts. Telnet is very popular, and many computers have Telnet installed. Thus,

PuTTYTelnet is a good addition to PuTTY.
