What's New in the Google Spreadsheets?

GSpread is a plugin for Maxthon that will show your recently viewed spreadsheets from Google Spreadsheets in your Maxthon sidebar. You can also search for your recently viewed spreadsheet from your Google Account and even open the spreadsheet in one click. Maxthon uses the browser's inbuilt clipboard to copy and paste the data. But GSpread provides a simple alternative. Just paste the spreadsheet into the form box and click the 'Paste' button to copy and paste the data into Maxthon. What's new 1. Added an option to turn on/off the pop up when you paste the spreadsheet 2. Added an option to open the currently viewed spreadsheet when you paste it 3. Added options to remove the login button from the main menu 4. Added a new splash page Hi all, this is an application for Maxthon that lets you share files in real time with your friends, without having to save them to your hard disk. You can also upload files to many sites. It is completely safe and works in the background, so no ads appear when you try to upload a file. This is my first Maxthon-made application and it's still in development. There are a lot of features that I'm working on, so many that I didn't even manage to add to the application yet. It will probably be useful for many people. Hi all, this is a plugin for Maxthon that adds the sharing option in the toolbar. It's a good plugin if you want to share a web page, but you can also choose to share a link to a file, folder or application. You can even share a link to a certain website, something that none of the other Maxthon-made plugins can do. Maxthon used to work with the java script framework Greetings. In my previous blogpost about the Greetings project, I mentioned that Greetings had a completely new scripting engine. That engine was called G-code and it was already in use by Greetings and a bunch of other browser plugins. In the future, Greetings will replace G-code and Greetings will use G-code 2.0. But there's still a lot of code in Greetings that needs to be re-written. Until then, I am updating Greetings. So, Greetings will be renamed from Greetings 1.0 to Greetings 1.1. It will use G-code 2.0 and be similar to what you see today. What's new This plugin will install the fonts in the font folder as well as a fix for the left double-click problem. Hi all, this is an application for Maxthon that adds a system to search the Internet for information, along with some other features. It uses the Google search engine to get all of the information you need, whether it be an image or
