I liked how you used the video from tributes channel the first time. I do have an idea for a post but it is inspired by you. I noticed that you have dvd extras and I have a dvd extras. I would like to pick your brain. I have been looking for a solution to work with excel to auto collate and the sync the information. I would want to use python. Is this possible? Thanks for your time. The most common tularaemia outbreak so far has infected 169 people and required 40 laboratory tests, according to public health authorities in Sweden. The outbreak occurred between May and August in Skellefteå and surrounding municipalities. There have been no deaths, although the infections have not yet been treated with antibiotics, which can suppress the bacteria's ability to spread and kill the parasite. Out of 173 infected people who were treated with antibiotics, 20 had relapses of their illness, according to a Swedish report on the outbreak written by the National Veterinary Institute. Read more: Tularaemia causes long-term damage to the heart and brain Seeks new risk group The report was written by researchers from the University of Copenhagen and the Björkgöta Hospital. The original report, published in the journal Emerging Infectious Diseases in November, was based on clinical diagnoses made by doctors. It was based on around 170 patients who were treated with antibiotics. The new report is based on around 250
