Generally, a spectrum analyzer is a test instrument which provides a full-bandwidth spectrum display. It typically has a swept frequency input and gives an instantaneous view of the frequency content as well as spectral flatness of the input signal. Using a spectrum analyzer allows a user to view the spectrum of the input signal and determine how the amplitude varies over the frequency bandwidth of the input signal. However, if the frequency bandwidth of the input signal is too wide, the spectrum displayed by the spectrum analyzer may be too complicated for the user to navigate or analyze. As such, it is desirable to have a spectrum analyzer display that is easy to analyze by the user
