It ends when the colored ball travels over the boundary of the square. In my opinion, it seems to be a Tic-Tac-Toe game. Is it? A: This game is called football (a.k.a soccer) and is a relatively popular sport. The rules are: The ball is round and it doesn't bounce. The field is a rectangular area that has all of the sides numbered, and ends. The field is divided into a grid of numbered squares and a goal (called a goalpost) is in the corner of each of these squares. There are two teams; each team has ten players (capped by the numbers 0 to 9). The objective of the game is to move the ball from your team's start point (usually the left side) to your opponents' goal by kicking it. The obvious difference between this and a Tic-Tac-Toe game is that in football the goal is not only confined to the corner, but the whole goal area (except the corners) is the area in which the players can move. Endoscopic balloon dilatation (EBD) and stenting for esophageal strictures aim to avoid surgery. Most patients with benign esophageal strictures respond well to dilatation, but the rate of recurrence is high. The aim of this study was to compare the success rate of endoscopic balloon dilatation before and after stenting in patients with benign esophageal strictures. A total of 55 patients with benign esophageal strictures underwent stenting between February 2007 and July 2008. The success rate of EBD was assessed before and after stenting. Twenty-nine patients who had undergone stenting also underwent EBD at a median interval of 5 months (range, 2-20 months) after stenting. In the 29 patients, the procedure before stenting was successful in eight patients (28.0%), failed in 14 (48.3%), and successful in seven patients (24.1%). EBD after stenting was successful in 28 patients (96.6%), failed in one (3.4%), and failed in one (3.4%) patient. The overall success rate after stenting was significantly higher than before stenting (92.7 vs. 56.0%, respectively; p = 0.001). The median length of all strictures treated was 18 mm (range,
