Your products are mainly for medical applications. You talked about the applications of yours for precision agriculture. What is your vision for this field? First, we continue to develop a smart farming system with AI. For example, tractor farmers can use our smart tractor to check whether or not the market price of onions has increased in a short time. If the market price has increased, the tractor can give priority to supplying onions to farms that are close to the market and are not supplying onions well. These two things can improve farmer's competitiveness. Through this, farmer can receive better price and higher income. Our products are mainly for medical applications, but our vision is to apply this technology to precision agriculture. Q. This year, I participated in your soft-lens camera's global design competition. What is your product's future? Earlier, we only thought about deploying our
