Q: Filter from different sources I have a drop down list and a text box. If the value selected is "All" the filter should work with two values in mind. A: Something like this should do it. If the parameter contains "all" it should be both in the list and the query. Otherwise it's the second one that will be included. And make sure to use this: because you need to be able to set "null" or "all" as the default value to be handled. Also, in your query you'll need to include both the WHERE clause AND your parameter like this: WHERE `extractid`=@p1 AND `abrtrank`=@p2 Adenovirus-mediated delivery of NMDA glutamate receptor subunits in the neonatal rat brain: effects on functional membrane properties. The Adeno-associated virus (AAV)-mediated transfer of the N-methyl-D-aspartate (NMDA) glutamate receptor subunit GluR1 and the endogenous GluR2 subunit is used in several studies as a way to modify NMDA receptor activity. To further characterize the mechanism(s) by which such changes occur, we transfected AAV vectors carrying GluR1 and GluR2 subunits into the hippocampus, a brain area known to be particularly sensitive to glutamatergic excitation and implicated in several neurotoxic or neuroprotective disorders. The responses evoked by NMDA and by AMPA/kainate (KA) were analyzed by means of whole-cell recordings. The increase in the amplitude of the NMDA responses was accompanied by a 20% b7e8fdf5c8

The genotoxicity of formaldehyde was assessed using a micronucleus assay in peripheral blood reticulocytes and a micronucleus test in bone-marrow polychromatic cells. Male CD-1 mice were exposed to either three air dilutions of formaldehyde or five air dilutions of formaldehyde for 2 h. They were killed at 1, 2, 3, 6, and 24 h after the termination of formaldehyde exposure and bone-marrow polychromatic cells were harvested. The results indicate that there is no evidence of formaldehyde genotoxicity in bone-marrow polychromatic cells at all of the exposure concentrations at 1, 2, and 3 h after the termination of formaldehyde exposure. However, there was a concentration-dependent increase in the genotoxic effect of formaldehyde aerosol in peripheral blood reticulocytes at 6 and 24 h after the termination of the exposure. The MNPCE/1000 reticulocytes per sample was 1.5 +/- 0.3, 2.3 +/- 0.3, and 3.6 +/- 0.3 at the 1, 2, and 3 air dilutions of formaldehyde, respectively. The 24 h MNPCE/1000 reticulocytes was 3.5 +/- 0.3 at the highest exposure concentration.
