(citing First State Underwriters Agency v. White, 609 F.2d 201 (6th Cir.1979)). This court has accepted the weight accorded an agent's actions when the agent is the one who initially invokes the power of the attorney. See First State Underwriters Agency v. White, 609 F.2d 201, 208 (6th Cir.1979) (holding that, when an agent is the one who invokes the power of the attorney, a principal does not have to show that its decision to allow a document to be drafted was in good faith, reasonable or carefully considered and that the agent has the burden to show the decision was made in bad faith). Here, an agent was hired and was the one that initially invoked the power of the attorney. Additionally, Mr. O'Donnell was the one that hired the attorney and was the one that requested the power of attorney. Therefore, Mr. O'Donnell has the burden to show the decision to allow the attorney to draft a document was made in bad faith. This burden cannot be met by Mr. O'Donnell merely asserting he did not know that his actions in signing the power of attorney were in bad faith. The jury had the opportunity to view and hear Mr. O'Donnell during his testimony. They could have made a determination as to whether his testimony was credible, or whether they thought he was intentionally trying to protect himself by invoking the power of the attorney. We find that, even if we were to accept Mr. O'Donnell's testimony as true, it does not meet the definition of a valid invocation of the power of attorney to create a genuine issue of material fact. [15] In Michaud, the Michigan Court of Appeals stated: "To adopt the argument made by the insurer in this case would be to say that the attorney's obligations to his client, his answer to an action against his client, and his duty to maintain the attorney's seal are meaningless and without substance." Id. at 121. [16] Having found that the insurance policies at issue in this case do not provide for any attorney's fees and/or costs, we need not consider whether the McCarran- 1cdb36666d

Which means CACertified Explanation: Windows Store apps must be digitally signed. For example, if you release an app for Windows 8.1, you must get an Activation Code for Windows Store apps that will be sold on the Windows Store. You can't use a standard self-signed certificate. Explanation for end users: Windows Store apps are binary programs with a different installation process than traditional desktop programs. After downloading the program, the end user can only install the app from the Windows Store. However, the app itself still runs in the background, separate from the main program. So what Microsoft has done is replace your clear text files and/or extract string with a hash. The hash is run through a public key algorithm such as SHA256 or SHA512. Algorithms like SHA256 are called Hash Algorithms because they take
