You can also use some free programs that allow you to make quick-and-dirty edits to your images. These programs, which are discussed in the upcoming section, can improve or at least streamline the creative process. * * * If you have a tablet that supports pressure-sensitive drawing, Photoshop has added a pen feature that enables you to fill shapes with color using the pressure of your pen. For more information on the pen feature, see the section, "Drawing letters with a pen." Working with Tricks of the Trade You can't become a real pro unless you can create a few cool effects. Some effects, such as lightening, desaturating, distorting, adding color, scaling, blurring, and so on, are relatively easy to understand and use. However, other more specialized, nonrepetitive effects require more advanced digital photo techniques to create, so you won't see those features in your basic basic editing program. Yet, you can quickly create a few basic special effects to make your photos stand out from the crowd.

Posing for the Camera Because you've now learned the basics of Photoshop, you should be able to use the "Paint" feature to quickly paint on your photos. In this exercise, you learn how to change your perspective on a photograph and create a photo effect by using a photograph of your favorite subject (or one of your friend's favorite subject) as a backdrop. Photomosaicing, a key technique in many Photoshop exercises, is covered in Book IV.

1. Open a new document in Photoshop, and create a new layer and fill the foreground with a blue color by pressing D to select the color and pressing K (for the keyword key) to place the blue fill color in the Foreground box. You can view the current Foreground color by selecting Layer Fill in the bottom left of your Layers palette and choosing More Colors (see Figure 11-1). To set the Foreground color to black, right-click (Windows) or Control-click (Mac) on the blue fill color. Then select Monochrome from the color-fill options. Choose Black if you're going for a monochrome look. You can also check out Chapter 5 to find out how to adjust a variety of color effects.
2. Resize the image to fit on a 10-by-7-inch page using the rectangle tool. Then rotate the image with an angle of 45

What's New in the Photoshop 2020 (version 21)?

Most of you have seen pictures of the brand new duos and trios. I'm trying to decide whether they will become favorites or if I will just pass. I use my trios for all the same stuff I do with my trombone — I play in different bands; I play in church; I play in a couple of bands that just had duos and are having trouble making ends meet because I'm the best. My lessons are in a duet with my brother. My method books are printed in duet because he likes my part. And our repertoire includes everything from Gershwin to Jacovelli to Beethoven. We can play Moonlight Sonata; we can play Beethoven's Fifth; we can play a song we both really like; we can work on a complicated part and have a whole hour in which I probably will make some progress; I'll play for a couple of songs; we can play something that looks easy to me, but that he'll laugh at; we play a Jacovelli and I hit a killer, a monster of a note he doesn't know how to play; he plays something I do know how to play, and he hit a few notes not in the lesson book; we can play Bach's B-flat Fugue and I will probably make a bunch of mistakes. I like to say that it's like the difference between a good teacher and an average teacher. The average teacher will say, "Well, take a lesson, you'll get better." The good teacher looks at the student and says, "Well, why don't you do this yourself?" That's how I look at the duos. I can't afford to buy every book that's out there, and I'm not going to try to buy one. I can't sit down with all this stuff and spend five hours of my life with it, when I could spend the same amount of time and just play a little bit and figure it out and do it myself and play it a hundred times.

The Blues claimed a 2-1 victory thanks to an Oscar Cazorla opener in the closing stages before second-half goals from Chris Wood and Nahki Wells saw them secure their first trip to the Champions League this season. The win took them second
