The system didn't seem to be complaining about the portrait orientation, but it was still printing in landscape. This is obviously not the best solution, but at least it works, and it's a solution that won't do any more damage than the end result. I'll try it out at work and tell you what happens. Resolution: Printers don't have this issue. :-\ They just print really small. Because of paper orientation. You can change it on the computer screen but it doesn't change the size of the printer.Q: Event Bubbling and finding the specific parent I have a page that is using jQuery and it contains several divs on a page. In each div, I have several elements (navigation, menuitem, button...). I would like to bind to the parent div. I was expecting to be able to bind to the "body" or "html" element, and have it work, but I'm finding that the bubbling is pretty far reaching. If anyone has any ideas to stop the bubbling, or a better way to do what I'm looking to accomplish, I'd be very appreciative of your help! A: Sorry it took a while, but here's a little something for you:

```
$("#firstid").click(function(e) {
$('#secondid').click(function(e) {
$('#thirdid').click(function(e) { $('#fourthid').click(function(e) {
$('#fifthid').click(function(e) { $('#sixthid').click(function(e) {

The highly thermo-tolerant Aspergillus terreus AS2084 was chosen for the production of L-asparaginase. A stable and high level of L-asparaginase activity was observed during the fermentation, with the supernatant during 96 h fermentation. By using of the glucose addition during 72 h culture, the cell growth was faster and more glucose consumption occurred in the fermentation. The crude cell extract was concentrated with the PEG 8000 precipitation method and the purity was up to 85%. After removing of the enzyme inhibitor, the purity of the enzyme was
