1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image processing apparatus and an image processing system, and more particularly to an image processing apparatus and an image processing system which are capable of setting an attribute for an image to be edited. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, document management applications in which a user who prepares a document (hereinafter, referred to as a "producer") compresses and manages the document have been in widespread use. The use of such a document management application allows a user who has accessed the application to specify a document prepared by the producer and to edit the document. The user who has edited the document sets a category to which the document is assigned, and also sets an attribute indicating an attribute of the document such as a subject to be set in the document (hereinafter, referred to as a "category attribute"). In recent years, digital cameras and digital video cameras which digitally record images as image data have been in widespread use. Digital cameras and digital video cameras are superior to silver-salt 35 mm film cameras in terms of portability, ease of capturing an image, and others. In a conventional analog film camera, the photographer typically sets and records the categories and the category attributes of the images with a plurality of operations. It is considered that the use of a document management application enables the user to easily capture an image, edit the captured image, set the category and the category attributes of the image, and record the captured image. Therefore, it is desirable that the user be able to edit the captured image so as to set the category and the category attributes of the image as described above (hereinafter, this is referred to as "setting a category attribute for an image"). There is also a problem that it is difficult for the user who has captured an image to know whether or not the category attribute of the image has been set accurately. It is desirable that when an image is acquired, the user be able to easily find whether or not the category attribute of the image has been set accurately. Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2002-250535 discloses a method of setting a category attribute for an image after the image has been acquired. Further, Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2003-103570 discloses an image processing apparatus which gives priority to a category attribute of a document. Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2004-15968 discloses a method of Susceptibility of Haemonchus contortus to tertiary alcohol dehydrogenase inhibitors and the identification of stereoisomers of trans-(2S,3S)-tetrahydrofuran-2-yl-pyrrolidine as novel benzimidazoles. Haemonchus contortus is an important nematode of small ruminants, particularly in the developing world. Control of the parasite population is difficult due to the fact that few drugs with high efficacy are available. The aim of this study was to investigate the potential of tertiary alcohol dehydrogenase (Adh3), a critical enzyme in the nematode's metabolism, as a new target for drug development. Tertiary alcohol dehydrogenases were isolated from the venom glands of H. contortus, purified using affinity chromatography, and identified by mass spectrometry. Kinetic properties and substrate specificity of the venom gland Adh3 were determined and compared to an Adh3 from yeast. The effect of two known inhibitors of Adh3, (2S,3S)-tetrahydrofuran-2-yl-pyrrolidine and 2-(1,2,4-triazol-5-yl)ethanol, was tested against H. contortus under in vitro and in vivo conditions. Bioassay-guided isolation and structure elucidation led to the identification of the new Adh3 inhibitor 2-(1,2,3-triazol-5-yl)ethanol. In vitro assays showed that both Adh3 inhibitors did not show any toxicity on H. contortus development. In vivo assays showed that both inhibitors had higher efficacy than ivermectin, the current drug of choice for H. contortus control, at the highest dose tested. The stereochemistry of the two inhibitors is important for their antienzymatic activity, demonstrating that the (2S,3S)-tetrahydrofuran-2-yl-pyrrolidine gives a higher enzyme inhibition than the (2R,3R)-tetrahydrofuran-2-yl-pyrrolidine. The compound 2-(1,2,3-triazol-5-yl)ethanol is a promising inhibitor with high activity against H. contortus.Q: What are the real profits of early Facebook investments? I have been reading a lot of articles regarding
