I want to have a small 5x5 grid of checkboxes, and when the window is resized, I want the checkboxes to rearrange themselves to fit the new window size. The problem is that the checkboxes appear to be drawn with a width of say 18 pixels, and I would prefer to have the checkboxes resize their width proportionally to fit the new window width. If I were to specify the width of a box manually, I would have to set the widths of all the boxes, which would be a nightmare. Any suggestions? How can I tell a grid of elements how to resize? A: Would this be sufficient for your purposes? var grid = function() { var checkboxes = document.querySelectorAll("input[type=checkbox]"); var columns = Math.floor(checkboxes.length / 5); var row, box; for (row = 0; row
