A host of new depth of interaction features are being introduced, including the introduction of 'Telekinesis' which allows players to gather their teammates by grabbing on to the ball. There will also be the creation of the 'Triple Threat' playmaker role, which takes advantage of players being able to play in a number of different positions across the midfield, enabling them to be dribbling or holding threats and also to fill in the gaps and create opportunities for passing. “We are excited to be introducing a range of new features for our players,” FIFA Ultimate Team Pro Manager and Producer, David Rutter, said. “We are really proud of the depth and breadth of gameplay modes in FIFA Ultimate Team and we are excited to be showing more of this as we bring FIFA 22 to fans all over the world.” “The addition of these new gameplay features will give our players more opportunity to express themselves in FIFA Ultimate Team,” said Executive Producer and Creative Director, Dan Abnett. “We are delighted to be able to offer players a deeper tactical approach in Ultimate Team, enabling them to dictate the flow of the game and orchestrate tactical masterclasses.”

The Deep Playmaker and Triple Threat Roles

The 'Triple Threat' playmaker role is designed to give players a variety of positional choices across the pitch, in turn creating more tactical variety. The Triple Threat playmaker role will give players the opportunity to choose their best attributes - dribbling, passing or shooting - for the role, depending on the situation. Players can be supported by teammates in possession of the ball, and can also assume the role of a Deep Playmaker, which will play in a wide position and link up with midfielders and strikers. The Triple Threat playmaker role will give the player more options when in possession of the ball, and will also increase the value of players in Ultimate Team.
