The team also announced that it has strengthened the narrative and characters of the upcoming game with a 'connected experience,' which will play out between March and August. This is the first time the story of the FIFA franchise has been fully connected across all platforms. "We believe that what makes football so captivating is how these players work in synchronised harmony to achieve the ultimate goal - a win. This week the only thing that matters is the FIFA World Cup and the World Cup Trophy," said FIFA 20 producer David Rutter. "We're proud to present 'HyperMotion Technology,' which improves every facet of football, and brings to life the crucial moments of each FIFA World Cup™ game. "Thanks to the increased visual and audio fidelity of this year's game, we have a deeper connection to the game world, and we're thrilled to introduce a fully connected narrative that allows our characters to experience every emotional journey alongside us. "It is our responsibility to ensure our games are accessible and fans still love the pure skill of football. In order to do so, we are reaching out to all players. We're asking our players to tell us what matters most to them in football. We are listening. Our first focus is what makes football unique: the beautiful simplicity of the game that caters to all skill levels, and we're always looking to improve and innovate," Rutter continued. "We want you to enjoy FIFA World Cup™, every aspect of the game and feel the power of FIFA wherever you are." In FIFA 20, Sports Interactive and EA introduced a new "connected experience" that sees all aspects of the game kept connected from the opening moments to the final whistle, even after the players have left the pitch. In the updated game, this includes a "connected gameplay" component where fans, players and coaches can engage with the game in real-time as the action unfolds. Throughout the game, all these connected moments play out as stories that take place in the same connected narrative universe. At major moments in the game, FIFA's 3D HUD and tracking system is also available to provide live commentary from the player's perspective, with the ability to share experiences with friends. This will include The Story, which is a new, fully connected, story which allows fans to immerse
