The rarity of the new fossil, described this week in the online edition of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, suggests that frogs were rare on the continent at the time. The researchers also found what they believe are bones belonging to a coelacanth, a long-dead relative of living sharks and rays that is the earliest such creature known from a marine environment.Q: How do I decide whether to use 'have' or 'have had' to talk about past transactions Have you had problems using that particular device? Have had problems using that particular device? Are you planning to have (or have had) any problems? Are you planning to have had any problems? I think you can easily guess what my issue is. I'm not a native english speaker. I've been writing messages using google translate. I feel confused when to use what. A: Have had problems using that particular device I suspect that it means: Has you had a problem using that particular device? or: Have you had a problem using that particular device? It could also mean: Have you experienced a problem using that particular device? Or: Have you experienced a problem using that particular device? This is a bit difficult to tell from your question because you're not using the full past-tense verb. We would need to know how the device in question was originally purchased to say for sure. "I am planning to use that device to solve a problem". This could mean:

Presentation of rhinitis to the primary care physician.

Prescription of oral antihistamines is the most commonly prescribed type of medication for rhinitis. In recent years, alternate modalities of treatment have been developed to evaluate whether more specific antagonists are better for different types of rhinitis. Studies show that symptomatic therapy produces superior relief to placebo, but such therapy has never been rigorously compared with intranasal corticosteroids for mild to moderate symptoms. Approximately one third of people with rhinitis have allergic rhinitis, defined by positive skin tests and blood serum IgE. Oral antihistamines and intranasal corticosteroids are the mainstays of treatment for this condition. By Dan Alexander and Kelli Kennedy in London A coal mine owned by one of China's biggest state-owned companies was responsible for an explosion that killed at least 65 people and injured dozens more, the official Xinhua news agency reported. The plant in the northern Chinese city of Shaanxi exploded and began burning on Friday evening, sending black smoke billowing high into the air, according to social media postings. A dense pall of smoke hung over the city, which borders Gansu province. The injured have been taken to hospitals in Xi'an, the city Xinhua described as the capital of Shaanxi province. The business magazine Caixin, citing local authorities and mine company employees, said the explosion was "probably due to the existence of a large amount of residue carbon" in the mine. The Shaanxi Daily, another local newspaper, said the blast was so strong that it d0c515b9f4
