... impostors in this film. You get used to it. But they don't feel like they're being played by real people. There's something deeply wrong there, I don't know what it is. There's something not right. ... The postman told me I didn't know. It was just this thing that it felt so wrong, I could feel it ... it was just so cold." Despite its mixed critical reception, The Hangover Part II became the highest-grossing R-rated comedy in North America and the second-highest-grossing R-rated comedy of all time, with worldwide box office earnings of over $444 million. Scott of The New York Times said the film "is funny to the point of being vulgar, but not vulgar enough, with a plot that is neither silly nor wholly unbelievable." Owen Gleiberman of Entertainment Weekly called the film "a sweet, dumb satire of the post-Titanic mythology of the stag-night hangover... He keeps on doing this, keeping it real, but at some point it simply stops being real." The Daily Telegraph's Peter Bradshaw called it a "ridiculously funny" film, but added, "however, there is an unconvincing, sometimes poignant surface level that I suspect will not help their case." On Top of the Lake said that the film is "an utter joy to watch. It isn't trying to be like its first film, it's getting much better at what it does, while still keeping up a frantic pace." Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun-Times said that the film "plays like a live show, a streamlined, fast-paced, funny, vulgar, and often outrageous comedy. But if you've seen the first film, you know what is going to happen. If you haven't, you'll be left with a surprisingly large amount of surprise
