Using a typical image-editing program, you can create an image that has been altered by using layers. A layer is the foundation of an image and provides the basis for manipulation and manipulation. When you create a new layer, it resides on top of all the other layers in the image. You can edit the appearance of that layer, or of any of the other layers, by making changes on that layer alone.

This can provide you with an editing solution to achieve the look that you desire for your image without affecting the appearance of other layers. In this chapter, you discover how to create layers and how to edit them, as well as how to save layers as a snapshot of your work. In the next chapter, you discover how to create and edit text. Creating

Layers After you have a digital camera or scanner and a computer, it's fairly easy to create image-editing functions in Photoshop. However, it's a fairly complex procedure to add layers. Many people have learned Photoshop in such a way that they can go through the process with little understanding of what is happening. In this section, I show you what's going on as you create layers, so that you can begin to understand the process yourself. You can then use the tutorials and other resources to learn more advanced techniques as you create work. Remember that when you are creating a new layer, there is no actual image beneath it. It's just a new place where you can work. You can apply effects or edit that layer to make it appear as you want it. The following list shows some of the things you can do as you create and edit layers: Create a new layer. To create a new layer, choose Edit ⇒ New. (Press the Control [Apple] + Shift + N) or press the keyboard shortcut Ctrl+N (Macintosh) or Command+N

(Macintosh). The New Layer dialog box opens, as shown in Figure 2-1. Here, you can specify the name for your layer and select the type of layer you want to create. You can then click OK to create a new layer. Create a new group of layers.

To create a new group, select Edit ⇒ Create Group. (Press the Control [Apple] + Shift + G or Command+G on the Mac) or press the keyboard shortcut Ctrl+G (Macintosh). The Create a Group dialog box opens, as shown in Figure 2-2. You can choose
