FIFA 22 also introduces Enhanced Match Day AI, which includes new rules such as crowd noise, a proprietary pitch sensing algorithm that helps players react in a naturalistic manner based on real-life environment, and intelligent substitution that helps to dictate a match. "This new generation of FIFA delivers a level of authenticity that represents the pinnacle of football simulation, and we're thrilled to be able to share it with our fans this March," said Peter Guber, SVP and Executive Producer, EA SPORTS. "As many people around the world love FIFA, we are proud of the groundbreaking advances our development team has made to bring new life to the engine to create a uniquely realistic, authentic experience." FIFA 22 innovations include: "HyperMotion Technology" - This is the most powerful use of advanced motion capture data in video game history, which enhances animations and movements of players and the ball. Players tackle, move and shoot with greater fluidity, allowing for more realistic moves and the most natural gameplay of any FIFA title yet. Players, set pieces and other action are further enhanced by "Adaptive Display." "Instant Actions" - A patented new AI system that reacts in a more human, more natural manner, reacting to the chaos of a real match. Players can see the opposition's real-time positioning and other players are tactically aware of both the team and opposition players on their radar. Your players will no longer blindly sprint towards danger, but instead look to take advantage of their surroundings. "Instant Replay" - For the first time in FIFA history, a new feature in FIFA 22 will enable players to review moments, including headers and throws. "Complete Player" - A new player model sees all player parts on the new joint player animation system. All players can be posed on the pitch in all situations, including defensive postures. Improved physics means that players use their real athletic and size range in gameplay, as opposed to being static and rigid. "Improved Attack Awareness" - Using the new objective-based gameplay in FIFA 22, players will now be able to better appreciate the 3D depth around them, and the importance of a pass. Players can look at their feet, look at their team mate and plan where their next move will be. "Additive Layer" - A new engine feature uses 3D depth data to help players better understand the key
