Maternal, Intra-amniotic, and Perinatal Factors Associated With the Short-term and Long-term Incidence of Arthropathies in the Future-sons of Premature Infants. Because the intra-amniotic environment is characterized by low oxygen tension and inflammation, it may be associated with the risk of joint disease. Our aim was to evaluate the maternal, intra-amniotic, and perinatal factors associated with the short- and long-term risk of hip, knee, ankle, and foot arthropathies in the offspring. A total of 2292 offspring of 500 singleton pregnancies delivered between 2005 and 2015 were enrolled. Maternal, intra-amniotic, and perinatal factors were analyzed with logistic regression. The risk factors related to the short- and long-term arthropathy were determined by Cox proportional regression. The survival proportion free from any arthropathy were 92.0, 77.8, 77.5, and 75.2% at 1, 3, 5, and 10 years, respectively, in the study population. In the multivariate analyses, maternal pregestational body mass index (BMI) ≥ 25 [adjusted odds ratio (aOR): 2.01; 95% confidence interval (CI): 1.17-3.45] and a shorter gestation (aOR: 2.34; 95% CI: 1.48-3.71) and higher mean cord blood interleukin-6 (aOR: 1.22; 95% CI: 1.08-1.39) were associated with a short-term hip arthropathy, whereas birth by cesarean section (aOR: 2.74; 95% CI: 1.13-6.62), gestation (aOR: 1.08; 95% CI: 1.02-1.15), and higher mean amniotic fluid interleukin-6 (aOR: 1.27; 95% CI: 1.09-1.48) were associated with a long-term hip arthropathy. Birth by cesarean section (aOR: 3.35; 95% CI: 1.27-8.90), a shorter gestation (aOR: 2.04; 95% CI: 1.02-4.08), and higher mean cord blood interleukin-6 (aOR: 1.58; 95% CI: 1.26-1.99) were

All posts for the month February, 2015 Today's post is very rare as it is a re-blog of a video I made for my local radio station about the school that I attended as a kid. My parents had a son and two daughters and once the son had been schooled my parents had decided that I would attend the school for the second round. At the time the school was a girls only school and there was a dance for the girls to have one day a week. All students were required to wear a uniform consisting of slacks and a top. The uniform was of a green material. I'm sure most of you can remember the inane energy this uniform induced, it was the 1970's and you can imagine. During the dance, a large panel of teenage girls marched past me as my lip curling countenance, made to match the green uniform, stared behind them. They swarmed to the bar and the music stopped. I was asked to dance. The music started again and the girls formed a line and proceeded to do the boogie woogie and the boogaloo. The dance went on for a little while longer as I stood there. I was totally confused. I was embarrassed to be seen standing there, watching this. I do not remember what I did or if I danced but I do know that the next day I got a call from the principal asking if I was alright, if there was anything wrong. I said no nothing. The next day I walked past the school and this time was asked by the same girls to join them. I joined in and was asked to go up and introduce myself. My parents were told and they were worried that it would be very embarrassing to have a 14 year old boy explain why he was choosing to go to a girls school instead of the boys school. So they got me a new outfit. I was not required to wear the new uniform, but I could wear the dungarees on my way home from school. This was the beginning of my freshman year and I never wanted to leave that school. My 2 girlfriends and I went through some very dark times. Many weekends we would go to movies like Saturday Night Fever and Midnight Rambler and get very drunk. We also had a great teacher. He let me read my favorite storybook every Saturday and Sunday and I remembered it all my life. Without him, I would not have had a true love of writing. An for the first time
