If this is your problem, contact your Internet service provider, because it is not a technical problem in Roblox. Q: Why is my account suspended?A: Please read our Terms of Use and ensure that your game is not in breach of any of the clauses there. Q: Why do I get "Your account has reached the maximum number of characters, messages, room, and block attempts" when I type a message?A: All Roblox users have a block limit and message limit. If you have already reached your limit, please wait a bit and if you have not reached it, you can go in the settings to increase your limits. Q: Why does my account say "This account has reached the number of friend requests" even though I haven't requested any friend requests?A: In order to avoid people spamming friend requests, your account will report this when it has reached this limit. Q: When I create a new user, my characters disappear. How can I fix it?A: There's a limit on the number of users that can appear in your game at one time. Once it reaches this limit, your characters are removed. Q: I want to create an online game for Roblox and I was thinking of using Adobe Air, but I need to be sure I can use all the features of the program. Could you please tell me what is the minimum hardware that I need to run a Roblox game?A: The minimum system requirements to run a game are PC or Mac. There are no requirements about the graphics card, the operating system, the RAM, or the storage. Q: What do the different colors (blue, orange, and red) indicate on a game

These type of posts are made by scamming agents (sorry for the hateful term lol) While you may think that this is a scam its actually a legal process. All of us on this website have the Legal Standards in mind. So to make some of you understand a little more about each of our Legal Standards. Standard #1Agency Categorical Determination Regulations: Agency categorical determination regulations prevent the Commission from altering an existing categorical determination. They are limited to reexamining a previous petition, request, or petition to make a new categorical determination in a different jurisdiction. Categorical determinations are made by the Commission when a standard sets out a general category of services, programs, or activities for which a particular classification is appropriate. The Commission does not make categorical determinations for all Internet services and applications; it makes categorical determinations only for services and applications covered by published and proposed rules, service order filings and Title II-based service order submissions that establish wholesale cost-of-service based price caps. See 17 C.F.R. § 12.8(a). Standard #1Categorical Determinations: The FCC regulations define a categorical determination as a declaration made by the Commission at the time of the original publication of an order or rulemaking that a particular class or group of services or applications is or is not eligible for the specified form of regulation under Title II of the Communications Act. See 47 C.F.R. § 1.2(a)(2)(xiii) (1996). In general, the FCC makes categorical determinations only for the six most significant telephone-related services and applications, including access to the telephone network, telecommunication services and devices, and the transport and termination of telephone calls. A generic categorical determination regarding the control of unsolicited advertisements was also made applicable to advertising over the Internet. Under this generic categorical determination, an Internet advertiser was not allowed to use a method of delivery to place unsolicited advertisements in a manner that gives an appearance of being an advertisement from a person or entity other than the sender.
